Rev. Paul Sanders of Worth Weds Wisconsin Girl

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wooton of Madison Wisconsin announce the marriage of their daughter Elizabeth to Rev. Paul T. Sanders of Worth Illinois. The couple were married at the bride's home in Madison, Thursday, August 25th, at 10 a. m.

They left for an auto trip through the east stopping at Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, New York City, Boston and back through Rochester, New York to visit Rev. Sanders brother. They plan to be back home the last week in September.

They will reside in the parsonage at Orland the coming year.

Orland Twp. Boasts $100,000 Home

The finest and costliest home in Orland township is nearing completion. Roy Holton, wealthy Chicago broker is the owner of this home. He purchased the former Burkhardt farm of 30 acres for $30,000 and has built a home and three car garage with living quarters above for another $50,000, and by the time the home is furnished, it is estimated that the combined cost will run well over $100,000.

Chas. Maehlein, local carpenter, and Arthur Keuch of Tinley Park, have been working on this place for the past ten months and finished their job last week.

This beautiful new country home will be one of the show places of Orland township.

Speeders Must Put Up Bond at Tinley

Since Tinley Park has employed a motor cycle cop speeding has been greatly reduced. On Wednesday night Magistrate F. A. Harper had two speed violation cases. Peter Malzen, 8550 South Carpenter st., Chicago was assessed $10 and costs for driving thru the village at 35 miles per hour. He appealed the case. C. Mason of Chicago Heights was charged with the same offence and was fined $5 and costs which he paid.

Heretofore the motorcycle cop when arresting a speeder merely handed the offender a slip asking him to appear on a certain date for a hearing. Many of these offenders lied and failed to appear making it necessary to issue warrants for them. From now on all speeders arrested will be required to put up a cash bond to insure their appearance for trial. Eight cases are still pending.

Mail Messenger Job at Tinley up for bids

The mail messenger job at Tinley Park for carrying the mail from the post office to the depot and back is open for bids for 10 days beginning Thursday of this week. Application blanks may be secured at the Tinley Park post office.

ANNEXATION VITAL ISSUE FOR MOKENA

The annexation matter which has been keenly interesting Mokena people is to come up again before the village council at their meeting next Wednesday night. The petition which was to have been examined by H. Rehn, the village attorney, will be reported on at this meeting. If the attorney recommends the petition, a special election will probably be called to submit the annexation matter to a vote of the residents of Mokena.

This is a peculiar situation. In most instances cities or villages seek to annex adjoining territory to extend their corporate limits, but in this case adjoining territory is seeking to come within the incorporate limits of the village.

The proponents of this annexation say that it would mean the development of Mokena to annex the territory in question as many new homes would be built and many new people come here to live.

It is said that all improvements, such as the extension of the village water system, streets, sewers, etc., would be done by special assessment and would not cost the taxpayers of the village one cent, as only those property owners who would be directly benefited by these improvements would come under the special assessment.

It is pointed out the village would have much more taxable property which would mean a bigger income for the village treasury. Street lights would have to be extended at the cost of the village, but the extra taxes to be derived would be an added revenue from the use of the village water.

On the other hand much opposition has arisen to the annexation plan, some people saying they do not want Chicago people to locate here, that only a lot of foreigners and negroes would come, but this is said to be the bunk.

As far as preventing the erection of tar paper shacks in this territory is concerned, the village board will have to pass a zoning ordinance restricting this district and prescribing what kind of homes may be built and fix a minimum cost.

Mokena has an opportunity now of developing, and if they turn this chance down, it is said the property owners now seeking to come into the village, may start a village of their own, incorporate and build which would mean that Mokena would then have real competition and perhaps fall asleep entirely.

Let us make our community one of activity and progress and not a city of the dead.

Digs Fish Worms With Electricity

Here is a new idea that every fisherman ought to try out. Instead of getting a spade and digging in the back yard for worms, let electricity dig the worms for you. This labor saving idea was tried out recently by W. R. Lynk at Mokena. He secured an iron rod about four feet long, one end of which was sharpened to a point. An electric light cord was attached to the other end and the rod stuck in the ground and the current turned on. The electrical current in the ground caused the worms to dig themselves out of the ground. After the rod was in the ground for a few minutes the earth was seen to move within a foot or two of the rod and soon a clump of about 40 worms came to the surface. With this device a can of worms for fish bait can be had with in a few minutes without any labor on the part of the fisherman.

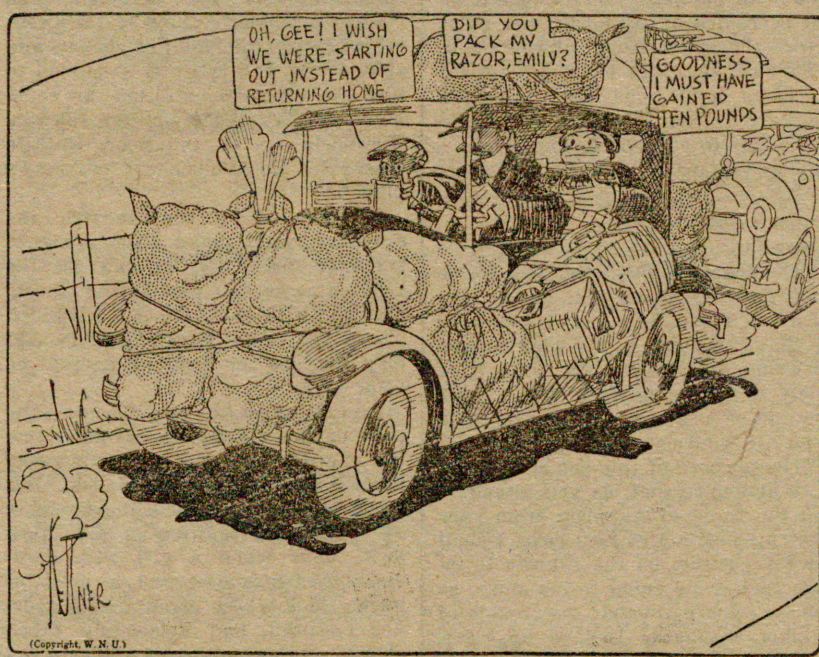

Population of Tinley Park 741

Charles Nielsen has finished taking the school census of Tinley Park and his report shows that the village of Tinley Park has a population of 741. This report shows a gain of 50 in population over last year. This population is only within the incorporate limits of the village.

Wm. Maihoff, Assessor of Bremen Township Is Dead

Wm. Maihoff, who has been assessor of Bremen Township for many years, died at his home south-east of Tinley Park Monday following a lingering illness.

He is survived by his widow, four daughters and one son. Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at the Bachelors Grove Lutheran church, with burial in Bachelors Grove cemetery. Rev. Wm. Greve, officiated.

The funeral services were very largely attended.

Toy Bell Undoing of Chicken Thief

For sometime many petty theft cases have been reported at Coopers Grove. Thieves stole chickens, hams and other things from the farmers in that section and were no respecter of persons, even stealing chickens from a minister's hen house.

One farmer decided he was going to trap the thief or thieves. He tied a cord to the hen house door and lead the cord into a bed room of his home. At the end of the cord a toy bell was tied. One night last week the thief opened the henhouse door, the cord snapped, the bell dropped on the floor and awoke two boys sleeping in this room.

They aroused the farmer, who grabbed his shot gun and sallied forth into the yard. He saw someone in the chicken house and called "halt" but by this time Mr. Thief was trying to beat it and failed to heed any demands. After calling "halt" the second time the farmer blazed away at Mr. Thief. Nothing was heard of the affair for several days and by the latter part of the week the report came that a man had appeared at Crete to have buck shot removed from his body and to have his wounds dressed.

Road Boosters to Meet at Orland School Aug. 31st

A joint meeting of Will-Cook County hard road boosters will be held at the Orland Park school house on the evening of August 31st at 8 o'clock standard time or 9 o'clock day light saving time.

Members of the Cook County Board of Commissioners, also of the Chicago Regional Planning Association are expected to be present and give some very worth while addresses on the hard road matters in which both counties are vitally interested in.

It is the desire of those sponsoring the gathering that as many good road advocates of Will County as possibly can get away, be present at this meeting. Remember the date.

Don C. Hall SAYS--

If I were to be asked, what in my opinion, was the most indefinite thing in the world, I would reply with out hesitation "The Illinois State Gas Tax Law". Some call it "The Governor's Law", others "The Downstate law", but as yet, no one has tried to accuse Chicago or Cook County or the Chicago Motor Club with having anything to do with its Parentage, farther than the fact, that while the "learned doctors" were congratulating themselves and each other upon the death blow they had given it and its timely demise, one of the striking legislative "wet nurses" slipped in, gave the innamte body a "shot in the arm" and it became a living "whatever it is".

Our resolution, asking for the enactment of "gas tax legislation of some kind" was certainly answered to the letter, for "some kind" is what we got. And yet I claim that it is better than none at all. It is an entering wedge in the right direction. I still contend that a tax on motor fuel is the most equitable tax levy that could or should be made for road building and road maintenance purposes.

The only feature over which there could possibly be any controversy or difference of opinion is in the matter of distribution, purpose and application of the accruing funds, and that is the principle objectionable feature of the present enactment, especially taken in connection with other taxes, license, and fees imposed upon this overburdened commodity, the Automotive vehicle. "What shall it profit us" though we gain a "world" of roads, and "loose our own" auto.

The present law, instead of being an instrument resulting from calm, cool, careful consideration of conservative, painstaking legislators, is a loosely drawn, indeterminate, deceptive, mongrel of a possible thoroughbred, something that somebody traded for, and took what they could get.

There is always a certain element of deception practiced in the art of trading and often a perfectly good piece of horseflesh is exchanged for a "stringbatter" bunch of "ring bones", "spavins" and "heaves". Just as long as the present system of Legislative trading continues to be resorted to, just so long, every official, from the Governor down,

STORY FROM THE START

Garth Guthrie, Canadian war veteran, having to live in an open on account of weakened lungs, is factor of a Hudson's Bay post at Elkwan. He came back from the conflict with a permanently scarred face, which he realizes cost him the love of his fiancée, Edith Falconer. Sir Charles Guthrie, his brother, is a millionaire war profiteer. With Etienne Savanne, halfbreed, his firm friend, Garth meets Doctor Quarrier, geologist, and his sister Joan. Their schooner has drifted ashore. Quarrier complains he has been robbed by a man known as "Laughing McDonald." At Elkwan an Indian girl, Ninda, tuberculosis victim, whom Garth has befriended, is dying. Joan, trained war nurse, cares for Ninda, but the girl dies. Charles Guthrie writes reproaching his brother for not coming home. Charles' wife assures him Ethel still loves him, but Garth in his heart knows better. Three of McDonald's party visit Elkwan seeking to buy gun shells. From them Garth learns of evil talk among the Indians concerning him and Ninda. With Etienne's help Garth wins the friendship of Saul Souci, "medicine man" of the Crees, and gets his promise to persuade the Crees to take their furs to Elkwan instead of to McDonald. Garth is ambushed by Joe Mokoman, Ninda's reputed father, whom the factor had driven from Elkwan.

The Ojibwa leered. "You tak' de woman. You kick Joe Mokoman. W'at you do wid de woman?"

"She is dead," said Garth, quietly.

"You tak' de woman to Albanee. You geeve Joe Mokoman mooch debt?" The face of the speaker knotted with hate of the man who was measuring the distance which separated them and—wondering.

"What do you want—how much trade goods?" temporized the white man as he covertly edged a foot forward in the snow.

"You geeve sled-load; flour, tea, blanket, gun?" The face of the Indian lighted with the thought of the spoil which awaited him at the post.

"You want a four-dog sled-load? Garth scratched his knotted forehead, as if debating the value of the goods. It was twenty feet—he couldn't make it. He must get nearer, somehow, he thought.

The Indian nodded. "Four-dog team—flour, blanket, all de—" With a quick movement he brought the gun to his shoulder as the white man slid a moccasin nearer. "Beka! Stop!" he cried, his swart face purple with rage. "You move, I feel you!"

It was no use. There was no chance of getting close enough for a lunge. Garth changed his tactics as the evil eyes of the other narrowly watched him. Turning his back, Guthrie calmly proceeded to finish the dressing of the caribou.

For a space the Ojibwa stood holding the gun on the back of the white man, his face picturing amazement and doubt. Then he said: "You geeve me dis stuff?"

"Sure," replied the man, busy with his knife, as he mentally gaped for a way out of his predicament—puzzled as to whether the Indian would shoot if he rushed him.

"You lie—I feex you!" warned Mokoman.

For a space there was no answer from the man using the skinning knife; then suddenly getting to his feet and facing the Indian, who warily covered him with his rifle, Garth said good naturedly: "You'll get the sled-load," but the eyes of the man who smiled had seen something which had started his heart pounding in his throat. His fingers, blue with cold, shut on the handle of his knife, turning the knuckles white. "Oh, yes! I'll give you—the stuff," said Garth, jerkily, his muscles stiffening like clamped springs as he waited. "You come to Elkwan—and I'll give you—all the stuff—you can—"

"Get 'em, Shot!" roared Garth, lunging forward and to one side, while a blur of black and tan catapulted into the Indian's back, carrying him headlong to the snow, as the rifle exploded. With a snap of powerful jaws, the hood of the Ojibwa was torn from his head—a lunge and the long fangs met in the flesh of the shoulder; then Guthrie dragged the maddened dog from the shrieking man who writhed in the snow, arms shielding his face.

With a grip on the collar of the struggling dog, Garth picked up the rifle on the snow and regained his own, while the Indian whined over his lacerated shoulder.

"Well, how about it now?" rasped Guthrie with a hard laugh, stroking the neck of the excited airdale.

"Hold dat dog!" cried the Ojibwa, getting to his feet and backing away from the black and tan fur who strained toward him, hot with lust of battle.

"I'll hold the dog. He won't bother you. And you stay where you are. You're going to tell your story to Saul Souci."

The evil eyes of the Ojibwa widened in surprise. "Souci?" he muttered.

"Yes! Souci is going to Akimiski to watch you people. He'll put devils into some of you before the winter is over. Now what did you throw that gun on me for? I ought to give you a good hammering."

The Indian essayed a smile but his face showed his fear. "I not shoot—I—" Then he asked weakly: "You lie w'en you say you geeve de trade good?"

"I lied," was the dry reply. "Now we'll start for the lake. Mush!"

When Etienne and Saul returned from the Muskeg, Garth told his story.

"By gar, dat good dog, Shot!" And Etienne rubbed the dog's ears.

"Yes," and Guthrie took the hairy head in his hands as he smiled into the dog's worshipping eyes. "He did the trick for Garth, didn't he?" he said as he bent and rested his face against the airdale's neck.

"Dis man, I tink cum up riviere for McDonald Ha! Ha!" said Saul.

"You think he is working to get the up-river trade away from us, too?"

Saul nodded. "He was here before de ice, some hunter tell me."

Garth turned to Etienne. "So McDonald is out to swamp us—hog all the fur this year? Well, we'll give him a fight for it, Etienne," he said, savagely smarting with stung pride at the cool attempt of the free-trader to steal the river trade from under his nose.

"W'at you do wid dis skunk?" And Etienne nodded toward the prisoner, sitting dejectedly on the opposite side of the fire.

Saul looked hard at the white man, who did not answer, then said in Cree to Etienne: "This weasel of an Ojibwa only makes trouble. It is better to send him back to McDonald Ha! Ha! under the ice," and the Cree drew a sneaky hand suggestively across his throat.

At the words and gesture, Joe Mokoman slowly changed color. His hands shook with fear. Drops of sweat stood out on his forehead. The small eyes of Etienne twinkled with amusement as he repeated the remark to his chief.

"It would serve him right, Saul, but I want him to take a message to McDonald."

That morning, with sleds heavy with caribou meat, the three started for Elkwan with the agent of McDonald Ha! Ha!

CHAPTER VI

When the last ice-cap, which imprisoned the north, receded, leaving in its wake the great inland sea of Hudson's bay with its long arm piercing the hinterlands to the south, among the many islands scattered in its track, by far the largest was Akimiski. And through the centuries Akimiski came to be known as a favorite haunt of the black, the black-cross, and the silver-gray foxes. And each winter, the Hudson's Bay company sent hunters there to seek the precious pelts. Then came the Revillon Freres, and they also sent men to winter on the island, for the spoil of its wind-harried tundra, that paralleled the west coast for sixty miles, was priceless.

And now to this land of the little foxes of the glossy black and silver pelts, for which fair women would pay fabulous prices in the markets of the world, had sailed the schooner of a stranger seeking the loot of the Akimiski barrens—a man of daring, who had sailed straight to the coast, and whose little schooner already lay locked in the shore ice of Seal cove. Here, while the tides, freighted with broken ice, still patrolled the strait, barring the birchbarks of daring hunters, cutting off the shore posts from all trade, McDonald Ha! Ha! was prepared to welcome the trappers of Akimiski with his flour and sugar and tea, his tobacco and cloth and gewgaws.

Garth Guthrie sat in his trade-room with old Saul and Etienne, in council of war. For days after their return from up river, the wind had made the strait impassable to the York boat, which had been left at its summer anchorage in the channel for this use. The tide had kept the lower river open and with the right wind the thing could be done, Garth had reasoned. But the Indians had shaken their heads. It was sure madness not to wait for the cold, which would set the ice far out from each shore. Then they might hazard it with the canoe on the sled.

As for Joe Mokoman, he had spent the days in whimpering over the sudden death which awaited him in the attempted crossing. But Guthrie had a message for McDonald, which Moko-man was to carry. It was the penalty, Garth told him, with a twinkle of the eye, for throwing a gun on a Hudson's Bay factor.

But the severe frost might hang off for weeks, until after Christmas, in fact; and the hunters would take their fur to the schooner, Guthrie argued, and the man who had lived for four years with risk in each breath he inhaled, in every measured minute, insisted that the attempt be made to cross the strait at once. So one morning they put out with a westerly wind and by much rowing and battering and dodging of drifting ice, landed Saul with his dogs, and Mokoman, on the shore ice of Akimiski, ten miles across the strait from Elkwan point.

Saul set out with his dog team for the camp of his sons, while the Ojibwa started down the coast with Guthrie's letter to McDonald, which ran:

"Mr. McDonald, "Schooner Ghost, Seal Cove, Akimiski Island.

"Dear Sir: "The bearer of this letter, Joe Mokoman, the Indian you sent up river to steal the trade from me, is returned to you with thanks. He tried to ambush me at Elkwan lake, and it is solely owing to the fact that I could use him as a messenger, that you look upon his handsome face again.

"The purpose of this communication is to announce that, as you intend to hog the trade of Akimiski from your strategic position at Seal cove, I shall use my position on the Elkwan to insure that trade going to me alone, so you may spare yourself the trouble of sending any more Indians up river, for you'll never hear of them again. As to the island trade, I was here first, and I'm going to fight you for it.

"GUTHRIE, ELKWAN."

Then the two men started back in the leaking York boat, and after a day of slavery at the sweeps, with the help of the northeast wind and the tide, reached Elkwan, and warped the craft up out of harm's way to her winter berth on the high shore.

The fight was on, but the saving of their share of the Christmas trade in foxes, when the pelts were prime, depended on the ice. Saul had a free hand to pick up all the skins he could get hold of for Guthrie at a good price if the Indians would wait, but the lure of the schooner's trade-goods, within easy reach, would be too much for the mercurial Crees, unless the strait froze and they could cross to Elkwan for the New Year's festivities.

The strait impassable, Garth and Etienne knew that the bulk of the valuable fur would go to McDonald. That was the problem they faced as they sat in the trade-house on their return, and made their plans.

"What makes you think that Saul can get them to hold their fur and keep away from the schooner?" Guthrie asked. Since Etienne's two evenings of smoke talk with old Saul, in his shack at Elkwan, before the Treaty Chief was landed on the island, the head man had acquired an optimism which somewhat puzzled his superior.

The black eyes of the half-breed snapped. "I tink Saul weel mak' de medicin' for dem. He ees beeg shaman wid dose Elkwan an' Kapiskau Cree."

"Can he control all his own people?"

"Some ov dem—some not, mebbe."

"What has medicine making got to do with getting our share of the trade, anyway?"

Again Etienne's leather-skinned face broke into a network of fine lines as his eyes lighted with amusement.

"You see, M'sieur Guthrie, w'en he start to work."

Garth was interested. He had thought only of Saul's influence as Treaty Chief. The use of magic in the defeat of McDonald's plans lent a new angle to the matter.

"You mean that he's going to hold a pow-wow of some kind and declare that the schooner is bad medicine—haunted by evil spirits?"

"Well," mebbe he have dream dat schoonaire breeng bad luck, yes. Mebbe he see devil on dat schoonaire, I don't know. He tell me he weel mak' de medicine-lodge on de islan'."

"Well, I'll be d—d!" It had never entered Garth's mind that the reputation of old Saul as one having intimate relations with spirits, good and evil, could be put to use on the island. But the wily old Cree had evidently taken it for granted that he was to set his powers as a conjurer against the odds which confronted the factor of Elkwan.

"Etienne, it's a great idea! If he can bewitch that schooner, we'll lick 'em yet!"

"Old Saul say he not know what he do. Some hunter ovaire dere are stranger. He tak' de dog an' go see dem, den he mak' medicine-lodge and breeng all the Injun to hear de spirit talk."

The idea was masterful. If the old shaman could convince the hunters of Akimiski that the schooner was "tabu," forbidden ground to the Crees—that it was the haunt of demons and spirits who had taken this method to lure the Crees to perdition, he could hold much of the trade for Elkwan. Nervously pacing the floor, Guthrie voiced his enthusiasm for old Saul's plan.

"Etienne, if he can bewitch the schooner, we'll make them work to get that fur. Why, we can use the very name against them—'The Ghost.' Haunted with devils! The Devil Ship! That's the idea! Laughing McDonald may not get the haul he figures on, after all."

Into the night, the two discussed the plan of the old Indian to undermine the operations of McDonald Ha! Ha! against the fox pelts of Akimiski. But when he sought his bed, the thoughts of Garth Guthrie were of the short, swift days when a girl with dark, straight-gazing eyes and a mass of unruly hair whose errant tendrils defied restraint, had noiselessly taken charge of the house and the stricken Ninda—who had, with such delicacy, eased the sting of the tragedy which followed his homecoming.

To the girl who, in her blond loveliness, smiled from his dresser, in the dim candle light, Garth vouchsafed the acknowledgment of a doubtful shake of the head. "The sister-in-law of the great Sir Charles Guthrie," he quoted from Clara's letter. "No, you haven't changed, my dear. You're the same old Ethel." And he blew out the candle. But before he slept, he told himself that whatever Christmas might bring in the way of ill luck to Elkwan, it would be compensated for by the arrival of the mail team from Albany with Joan Quarrier's promised letter.

Frozen in under the lee of the timberless hills circling the cove, the schooner of Laughing McDonald lay sheathed with ice and snow, snugly wedged in her winter berth, her bare poles and stack, from the galley, alone marking her in the litter of broken ice.

In the cramped area of the little cabin, piled with boxes, sat three men: Skene, the middle-aged Newfoundland mate, with the short leg; Breauf, the master, big, black-bearded, beefy, with small, hard eyes, which shifted overmuch as he talked; and on a strongly made wooden box with a heavily stenciled end, was doubled the third. Although hunched on the box of ammunition, his long arms clasping his knees, the lean bulk and length of the man were manifest. From the sleeves of his arctic overshirt, wrists and hands, eloquent of the bone and thews muffled in the thick clothes, protruded. Anywhere between Whale river on the east coast and Elkwan, the face of this man would have furnished his identification. Below rebellious russet hair and cold blue eyes, the devastation left by a shell fragment had baffled the art of the plastic surgeons. The patched semblance of a mouth, twisted with a gashed cheek into an endless leer, like a gargoye on a gothic tower, stamped the face of Laughing McDonald with an aspect fiendish, diabolical. Young, with the body of a Viking, this man with eyes blue as the bergs which sweep its coast had returned to Canada from the war, wearing for features a comic mask, which, according to their kind, shifted the eyes of the beholders in pity, or drew the stealthy snigger of derision. But most, who for the first time looked upon the great-shouldered giant with the ice-blue eyes and mangled mouth, turned to marvel what a man for the eye must have been he who was now.

Indians Resent Terms Derogatory to Race

Melvin R. Gilmore of the Museum of the American Indian in New York says that the Indians resent having the words "squaw" and "papoose" applied to their women and children. "The use of the terms 'buck,' 'squaw' and 'papoose' is not only an offense against refined speech," according to Gilmore, "but those who use such terms are thereby incapacitated to fairly appreciate the Indian, or anything of Indian culture. The psychological effect of the use of such terms is to inhibit the mind of one who uses them from estimating Indians in their proper human relationship. And I may say that of all the wrongs and injustices suffered by the Indian race, the native American race, none causes more bitter, burning resentment, and naturally so, than this of declassing Indians apart from all human kind by the use of these reprehensible and derogatory terms."

Book Buyer Got Bargain

A recent issue of the Boston Herald announces the presentation to the Harvard College library of "A Book for Boys and Girls," by John Bunyan, and published by "Nathaniel Ponder at the Peacock in the Poultry, London." Ordinarily a child's story book would not be of great interest to Harvard librarians, but this book is different. Perhaps Miss Miller, the former owner of the book, can best realize just how different this book is from the other books, for she purchased it from a peddler for about six cents and only a few months ago sold it at auction in London for $10,000.—Market for Exchange.

Paris, which contains more than 100,000 trees, has only one oak tree. The commonest ones are platanes, chestnuts, elms and maples.

Wonderful Animal

Is the Sea Crab

The sea crab is a wonderful animal and could teach man something that would greatly enhance his chivalry, says Robert O'Neil of Tampa, Fla. The females shed their shells during the early spring, which leaves their bodies white and tender and a lure for small fish, at whose mercy they would be in short order, but Mr. Crab attends to all this in true husband style. While his mate is feeding along the shore in shallow water he follows closely and guards every attack with his strong claws. I have watched this performance often with interest from the shore for some distance. The female wanders leisurely along apparently unconcerned, while the male is kept busy grabbing at the numerous fish as they constantly make a rush for a bite. Should he cease his vigilance for a moment his mate would soon be seized and devoured. When the male crabs eat or sleeps is a mystery.

To Patrol Forests

William Finlayson, minister of lands and forests for the province of Ontario, reports that his department has purchased and is bringing from England, four seaplane "moths" for use in connection with forest patrol work in northern Ontario, and for detection and fire-fighting work in the northern forests. These planes have a wing spread of 30 feet, compared with a wing spread of 86 feet of some of the airplanes now in use by the department. They have a speed of from 80 to 90 miles an hour.

Endless Track for Plane

Landing skids consisting of endless belts are being tried on airplanes in France. Preliminary tests have indicated their feasibility. The belt, or "traveling track," is mounted on a set of ballbearings between two aluminum shells. The belts are said to reduce the chance of the plane's overturning, to simplify the task of landing on rough ground, and to ease the shock of alighting.

Oh, Dot!

When little Dorothy Kitchen, film comedienne, applied for a part, William Lord Wright, supervisor of the unit, looked her over and exclaimed: "My, where did you get those great big eyes?"

"Father and mother gave them to me for a birthday present," said Dorothy demurely.

Sizing Her Up

"What do you think of that new redheaded girl?" asked Yvonne of the rapid fire restaurant.

"I judge she knows twice as much as she ought to, and not half as much as she should," responded Heloise, the head waitress.

TWO WOMEN FOUND HELP

Their Sickness Banished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Nina Matteson, Box 206, Oxford, N. Y., writes—"If it had not been for your medicine, I could not have done my work as it should have been done. Mother told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I had read in different papers what it had done for different women. She wanted me to try it, so my husband got me one bottle at first; then I took two others. Now I am feeling quite strong again."

Mrs. Ernest Tanguay of Adams, Mass., says she was ill for four years and could not sleep nights or go out on the street. She read about the Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking eight bottles she was able to do all her work and go anywhere and is quite herself again.

This dependable Vegetable Compound is a household word in thousands of homes. The fourth generation is now learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than half a century, this reliable medicine has been used by women with very satisfactory results. If the Vegetable Compound has helped other women, why shouldn't it help you?

STILL FEATURING SNAKESKIN; CLOTH DRESSES FOR GIRLS

IT WOULD seem as if the fashionable world had become snake-charmed. At the beginning of this vogue women looked askance at carrying a bag or wearing shoes or gloves made of snakeskin; gradually they yielded and so the mode has continued to weave its fascination, which has not yet been broken.

When early in the spring, snakeskin apparel appeared, it did not seem to is happening to tots' dresses these days. It is very apparent that little American girls are adopting the French fashion of dresses, oh! so short.

There's plenty of color in the juvenile style picture this season. To achieve novel color effect, designers are employing artful fabric treatments, the inset method especially proving successful. That is, a contrasting color of the same material as bespeak other than a flash of the sensational—a mere passing fancy. However, midseason and fall styles disclose the fact that serpents reincarnated into coats and hats and such smart details as handbags, belts and shoes are still moving about on the stage of fashion.

Indeed so popular have snakeskin effects become that some of the newest silks for blouse and for scarf, for coat linings and dress trimmings are printed in snakeskin patterns—which proves again that "imitation is the sincerest flattery."

Now comes along a new tribute to the fashionable serpent—the snakeskin raincoat made of rubberized fabric imitating reptile effect.

As a trimming snakeskin is really wonderfully attractive. Some of autumn's smartest jersey dresses in two-piece styling are detailed with pockets of snakeskin with narrow bands inserted at wristline and on the collar, also finishing the ends of a scarf tie.

Included in recent showings of early fall accessories one finds many snakeskin bags, both genuine and imitation, both of cobra and watersnake variety.

One sees also snakeskin patternings on felt hats, done by handpainting on beige and string-colored felt grounds. The snakeskin coats in the picture bear the seal of Paris approval.

that of which the dress is made is inlaid, so to speak, with clever seamings.

A close study of the frock in the picture will reveal an interesting inset styling. This little dress is of chestnut colored wool rep with insets of a lighter brown ingeniously seamed into the body of the garment.

These inset constructions present vast possibilities for intriguing design. For instance, a navy blue jersey frock has inserted strips of French blue, so seamed as to radiate from a point at one side, like spokes of a cart wheel.

Another simple interpretation of the inset treatment is that of making a deep yoke of a light tone with a darker portion sewed below, the hemline displaying a third-degree coloring.

Dresses for children not only employ inlays of one color, but of many. Ingenious seaming is given to squares, triangles and other conventional motifs of various shades until a gay and modernistic patterning is the result.

Unbroken lines from neck to hem is the most approved styling this season. In the soft crepes and gingham this is accomplished by means of smocking, shirring, tucking and plaiting, which allows the fullness to fall from the shoulder. Not only is the peasant-type frock heavily smocked, but this same form of handiwork is very popular throughout all juvenile styling.

Cunning Little Dress.

The envelope bag under the arm of the figure to the left is snakeskin trimmed.

After vacation, then what? Outfitting the little folks for school answers the query. Considering that children are so decidedly in the foreground of fashion these days, it becomes imperative that their frocks be well styled, not only for "dressup" occasions but for school wear and play-time hours as well.

Short, shorter, shortest: that's what

Stylists are using for children's day-time autumn frocks such woolsens as jersey, kasha, wool crepe, serge, rep and velveteen.

For coats, suede cloth, broadcloth and velveteen are choice for dressy types, with novelty checks and plaids for sports cloaks. The new coats are featuring chin collars, some of them fur-bound, others adding scarf-like ties made of self-fabric.

Adult Butterflies and Moths Eat Little

The chief difference in habit between moths and butterflies is the fact that with one of them most work during the day shift and with the other most work the night shift, writes William Atherton Du Puy in Nature Magazine. The chief difference in form is the way most of them wear their wings. Most butterflies put the wings on as shutters are put on a window. They are worked back and forth like shutters. Most moths, on the contrary, fold them down on the back.

Neither moths nor butterflies feed to any extent as adults. The winged state constitutes their day of glory and of mating. They sip a bit of nectar from a flower here and there, but this is by no means a serious attempt at food-getting. They could quite well get along without any food at all. The eating of a lifetime is done in the caterpillar stage. Most caterpillars are leaf feeders.

Panama "Home of Orchid"

The designation, "Home of the Orchid," has been applied to Panama because of the great varieties of orchids found there. It has been explained that this is due to the fact that, though Panama is small, it has a great variation of climate, ranging from the humid lowlands of the jungle to the mountains of Chiriqui, which attain an altitude of more than 5,000 feet. From the earliest times Panama has been a fruitful field for the orchid collector, and the first professional collector of which there is a record was Luis Nee, a French botanist, who visited Panama in 1784 and in 1789.

Almost a Vacuum

The nearest approach to the creation of a vacuum has been accomplished by Prof. R. W. Sorenson at the California Institute of Technology at Pasadena. In connection with the electrical switching mechanism of the high-tension transmission plants, he has made a glass bulb containing only one-millionth part of its original content of air. This near-vacuum prevents arcing when the current is suddenly shut off as it is often necessary to do.

Polish Women Now

Active in Politics

Polish women are steadily increasing their political activities. They have elected more members of their own sex to office than have their sisters in the United States, judging from a report recently made to the Zurich bureau of the Socialist and Labor International.

As a result of the recent municipal elections in Warsaw there are eleven women on the board of aldermen. Five of the women members belong to the Polish Socialist party, five to the various bourgeois groups, and one woman belongs to the Jewish Labor bund. During the municipal campaign much stress was laid on the fact that the Socialist program in Poland calls for special legal protection for mothers and children.

FACTS -AND THE OPEN MIND

THE MOST important element in business success—and the most difficult—is to be sure that you have all the facts before you act.

TO GET them all, from every possible source, is the first objective in General Motors. The Research Laboratories contribute some. These are nuggets, left in the crucible, after hundreds of ideas that looked good have been burned away. The Proving Ground contributes others. Dealers contribute. The public contributes. Every department contributes. Through the whole organization runs a spirit of inquiry and of rigid insistence on proof.

OUT of such thinking come the new models announced from time to time by Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick, LaSalle, Cadillac—all with Fisher Bodies. And by Frigidaire. Each new model is a tested step forward. Nothing goes into it as a result of habit or guess or pride of opinion.

Nothing counts but hard-won facts, gathered and used with an open mind.

Orland Park News

Rev. Elmer Setterlund and family expect to leave for Salina, Kan., next Wednesday, where the former will teach in a college. He has served the Orland Park M. E. church as pastor for the past two years. The well wishes of his many friends go with him and his family.

Business is booming in Orland Park according to present indications: A new market and grocery is to open in the Zerb's Building on September 1st. This new business is coming from Midlothian. A new drug store is also seeking a location here and may also locate in the Zerb's Building, it is said. A new barbershop is going in the Steffen Building. Mr. Steffen is having much remodeling work done on his place preparatory to expanding his line of business. He is going to enlarge his shoe department into the new addition that he is to have erected on the west side of the present building. A new basement is also being constructed.

While Gordon Powell was in Chicago Monday, his car was struck by another driver and quite badly damaged. Luckily no one was hurt. Clarence Beagley, our popular local electrical contractor and radio dealer, has just taken over the Frigidaire agency for this section. He has quite a number of wiring contracts signed up which will keep him busy for several months.

Frank A. Powell, assistant cashier at the Orland State Bank, has returned from a delightful trip to Minnesota, which also served as his vacation. He is on the job again at the bank.

The Local Board of Improvements met Wednesday night to take up the matter of building sidewalks in the Nichols sub-division.

The Orland Park M. E. church is planning for a very busy year ahead and especially a very active winter program. Rev. Paul T. Sanders of the Worth Community church will serve this congregation. Two student pastors will take care of the Worth field while Rev. Mr. Sanders will supervise the work in both the Worth and Orland Park charges.

At a recent meeting, the village board passed an ordinance, that all users of city water must have meters, and fixed the water rate at 50c per thousand gallons for the first 10,000 gallons, and forty cents per thousand gallons for each additional 10,000 gallons. A minimum fee of $5 for six months regardless of how much or how little water was consumed during that period, will be collected twice a year.

The Orland Park ladies have organized the Orland Park Woman's Club. Following are the officers:

Mrs. Edith Smith, president; Mrs. Ella Loebe, treasurer. The members are: Edith Smith, Ella Loebe, Bertha Haehnlein, Mrs. Davidson, Pearl Jennings, Rose Kay, Viola Powell, Mae Quigley, Elizabeth Arnold, Esther Klein, Ivalyn Schmaedeke, Adella Cooper and Etta Haus. The club meets every two weeks on Thursday afternoon. Playing of 500 is the diversion at these meetings. Mrs. Rose Kay entertained the club last Thursday. Mrs. Bertha Haehnlein and Mrs. Adella Cooper were the prize winners of 500.

Mrs. Louis Nicolai entertained the Ladies Bunco Club recently. Those winning prizes were Mrs. L. Nicolai, Mrs. Sherman Knox, Mrs. Molly Reich and Mrs. Harry Heiting.

Miss Annabelle Davidson who was recently operated at the Blue Island hospital for appendicitis, is improving nicely.

Mrs. Gebhardt Koehler entertained the Ladies Aid of the Christ Lutheran church at a coffee at her home on Friday afternoon.

While Daddy Bartels and son were enjoying a car ride Sunday, Daddy lost his valuable cap. Finder will be rewarded by leaving same with W. T. Anders, otherwise known as Nebraska Bill on the hill.

Visitors at the home of George Gee Sr., are his nieces, the Misses Adelaide and Flora Gee, daughters of the late Joseph Gee of Minn. Miss Flora is from New York where she has been taking post graduate work in eye, ear, nose and throat diseases and also practicing as a trained nurse.

Miss Adelaide, who was doing Red Cross relief work in Miami, Florida, is at present on the social service staff of Memphis, Tenn., in the homes department.

British Rule

In India

By Paul T. Sanders.
How British Rule Was Accomplished.

The British rule in India was brought about in a very gradual and natural way. They did not go in with conquering armies and subdue the land, but rather went in as peaceful traders seeking good will of the natives.

The British East India Company went first with a view to seeking trade with the natives. They gained control of some of the sea ports and gradually worked inland, until gradually the country was more or less controlled by the company.

This rule went very well for a time until the company began to gain a great deal of power, then they began to abuse their rights as often will happen in such cases. The British Government took over the rule shortly after the "Sepoy Mutiny" in 1857. They then organized the government so as to give all possible justice and freedom to all concerned. One difficulty was that British dominated the situation.

Advantages of British Rule To India

The British rule has done a great deal to bring India from a semi civilized state (in terms of western civilization) to a progressive nation. The great reform movements of India have been brought about through British influence, because they have had a taste of the spirit of such movements from the study of the history of Great Britain.

The educational system has been greatly improved through the establishment of government schools where the English language is being taught. These schools also teach the modern viewpoints in all branches of learning.

The old caste system is also being broken down and old customs that were extremely unchristian and often cruel are now being done away with. This is being done to a great extent by the natives themselves but largely due to the influence of the white races.

Disadvantages of the British Rule in India

England has gained a great deal from India especially in a commercial way. India is very rich in natural resources and certain agricultural products. This works in very well for England as she can take the raw material and turn out the finished product in her mills.

England, because of her dense population which is confined to such a small area, has to have such an outlet for her products and her people. India also furnishes a means of occupation for many of the British subjects in the country itself.

There are some distinct disadvantages of the British rule in India.

It has caused the people to become dependent on a higher power, because it has taken the power away from them. They are not a free and independent people, this always works to the disadvantage of a nation.

The evils of the British industrialism are being forced on the people. This is causing them to congregate in the larger cities and live under very bad conditions. The moral and physical life of the people is thus impaired.

Their native art and industry will eventually be destroyed under such a system, because the rush of the Western world at present at least, is not adaptable to Indian civilization.

The native political life is also hampered to a great extent, that is their own expression on political questions does not count for a great deal.

The problems of how to remedy these situations is not such an easy thing to suggest. The British have upset the old system so of course it is necessary that they aid in the readjustment to the new way. They are really doing the very best practical thing in going slow in giving India their liberty. It seems that India should have the same rights as Canada and it is likely the plan that Britain is thinking of, and yet they are moving very slow toward it.

Christian Movement in India

The Christian movement in India has many distinct problems to meet and solve in its advancement toward the ideal situation.

There is the problem of meeting the various religions now existing there and each of these have a very firm grasp on the people. The various customs and doctrines of the people make the path of Christianity rather hard. On the other hand these very customs might work to advantage, because when the people are shown the right way of living there is a great contrast in favor of Christianity.

The people themselves are a distinctly religious type because of their mythical natures. This makes them very susceptible to religion, and because of this they will undergo many hardships for their belief.

The Place and Plan for Christian propaganda is in the educational side of the life of the people. In this way the mission movement may instill the Christian ideals into the younger generation and thus bring about a gradual change in the nation.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON FRANCINE'S THRIFT

As Helen settled herself in Aunt Emmy's big chair she said: "Jack Hunt has bought the Briggs place. I never was so astonished in my life. Jack didn't have a dollar when he married Francine and now he's bought a house."

"Well, my dear, it's not so surprising to me. Francine is responsible for their prosperity."

"Why, Aunt Emmy, I thought she was awfully frivolous. I remember how disappointed I was when Jack married her. She seemed entirely too pretty and too well dressed to be a good wife. When I dined at their house I thought she was frightfully extravagant about her table. She must have paid her cook a lot to have the food she served."

Aunt Emmy smiled. "I liked Francine from the first," she said. "She and I became good friends. She told me how worried she was because Jack did not seem to think of the future and never tried to save money. Everything about housekeeping was so new to her that she was glad to come to me with her little problems. I advised her to save regularly, no matter how hard it might be. She coaxed Jack to open an account at the bank for her household money. He thought it was silly because they had so little. She said she could keep more accurate accounts if she had a bank account. He said they didn't have enough to keep track of. She insisted she wanted to learn to keep accounts. Then, when they got rich, she'd know how."

"I don't need to tell you how they prospered. Three of the sweetest children in the world, and now a house! Jack is proud as he can be."

"Yes," interrupted Helen, "but how did she do it?"

"The very first week after she started her checking account at the bank she took the money she saved and opened a savings account in the thrift department, where she got interest on her savings. You see, she was determined to save at least 10 per cent of her income. She saved steadily. She asked me to help her plan things out and together we worked out a budget so she could divide her income to meet her expenses. When her plan was working well she told Jack."

"He was tickled to death. Then he began to save too. Francine wanted a real home. They saved for that. They have been married six years now and they haven't a debt in the world. That excellent food, my dear, was all prepared by Francine herself, just as her pretty clothes are made by her from remnants and odds and ends she picks up at bargain prices."—A. B. Aymes.

NEW LENOX

The latest boy organization is the Boy Rangers which has been organized recently. About nine members have been enrolled thus far. The boys range in age from 8 to 12 years. The organization which is under the leadership of Rev. Morris Galloway, is in no way connected with the Boy Scouts and is a distinctive organization of its own.

The local M. E. church is going to have a new furnace installed, which was purchased thru N. F. Heiman of Mokena who is to have charge of the installing also.

Work on building the Boy Scout Cabin in the camp grounds is about to start. Excavation work for the foundation has been finished and the pouring of concrete is to start this week.

The opening of the new New Lenox State Bank is being delayed by not receiving the vault door. It will probably delay the opening for several weeks.

George C. Petersen and family moved Sunday into the flat above the new bank. This flat is modern in every way and the finest of its kind around here.

Postmaster Bert Brown returned Sunday from a fishing trip to Wisconsin. He was accompanied by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kennedy of Joliet. On Saturday they caught 264 pounds of fish. Postmaster Brown brought quite a number of fish with him and many of his friends here enjoyed fish dinners on Monday.

He also brought dainty souvenirs by way of white birch bark canoes, broom holders, etc.

Leigh Jones is spending his vacation at The Dells in Wisconsin. Chas. Cooper is spending his vacation at the same place.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Scherpe returned the past week from a five weeks auto trip thru Wisconsin and Minnesota. A fine time is reported.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Miller are expected home this week from a 3 weeks vacation in Minnesota.

Word comes of the serious illness of Andrew Nelson in Minnesota. It is said his condition is very grave and last Monday he was very low. Mr. Nelson will be well remembered by the older residents of New Lenox. He resided on a farm north east of here before he moved to Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Corp and Mrs. Styck spent Sunday with relatives near Custer Park.

Misses Bessie and Laura Jones are visiting at Sycamore, Ill.

The supper given at the M. E. church parlors last Thursday night was well attended. The proceeds will go to the furnace fund.

Archie Corp has purchased the George Smith property north of the village and is having the dwelling remodelled.

Perfect Comfort
for the woman driver

An Adjustable Steering Column to Suit Your Convenience

Buick for 1928 is extremely thoughtful of feminine comfort. One indication of this consideration is Buick's new steering column, which may be adjusted to the most comfortable position for women, as well as men.

And in addition, Buick for 1928 has a new steering wheel—slender to fit feminine fingers—yet deep and solid to provide the firm grip men demand.

Buick for 1928 pleases women because it is easier to drive—because it is more comfortable to ride in—and because it is the acknowledged style-leader among motor cars. That's why you see so many Buicks at fashionable gatherings and on the smartest boulevards.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Secretary of the Illinois State Association of Attorneys.

Attorney General Carlstrom has ruled that the county must keep state aid roads in repair, stating that they cannot be legally abandoned, in opinions delivered to State's Attorneys Walter S. Lamont, Paris, Edgar county, and P. N. Lewis, Lawrenceville, Lawrence county. Claiming that the state had failed to pay any portion of the maintenance on state aid roads, the Edgar county board of supervisors adopted resolutions to the effect that the county abandon the roads and turn them back to the counties to be maintained by them. These resolutions are ineffectual, said Attorney General Carlstrom.

Gov. Len Small has set October 9-15 as fire prevention week for the state.

Fare and a half rates will obtain on railroads from all points in Illinois, and from St. Louis, Keokuk, Iowa, and Hannibal to the state fair. Tickets bear the return limit of August 29.

Dr. Janette H. Bolles, Denver, will again take charge of the children's clinic conducted at the state fair by the Illinois Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons.

In its last survey, the United States Department of Agriculture estimates the value of Illinois farm land at $4,199,450,312, including buildings. McLean county has the largest farm land area, 707,262 acres.

Major William J. Butler, Springfield, succeeds Col. Frank D. Whipp as superintendent of the St. Charles state school for boys. Colonel Whipp has been made superintendent of the Illinois school for the deaf, Jacksonville.

Judge Louis Fitzhenry ruled that the Meadows Manufacturing company, Bloomington, committed no act of unfair competition against the Maytag company of Newton, Iowa, in the washing machine case which took up a month of the federal court's time.

Henry B. Rankin, childhood friend of Abraham Lincoln, and author of two books descriptive of the emancipator's life, died in Springfield, August 14, having passed the age of ninety by a few months. As a young man he was a student in the law office of Lincoln and Herndon, but his friendship with the man who was to become President dated from the time Rankin was ten years old.

O. T. Olsen, superintendent of the division of plant industry, Illinois department of agriculture, has assigned corn borers scouts to go out from these outposts: Waukegan, Grant Park, Watseka, Chicago Heights, Downers Grove, Des Plaines, and New Lenox. The infestation which these scouts may discover will be eradicated, if possible, with the aid of federal agencies.

A semicentennial celebration of the founding of public health service will take place in October, at Springfield. A digest of the history of health in Illinois is being prepared and will be distributed at that time. The history is being edited by Dr. W. A. Evans, Chicago, and shows the course of disease epidemics since the time of the prehistoric mound builders, and through the Indian, French, English and American periods.

"Bag worms" are the most prevalent of the insect pests which have damaged shade trees in Illinois this summer, according to reports received by State Forester R. B. Miller. A poison spray, made of arsenate of lead at the rate of three pounds to fifty gallons of water, can be used, but this should be done in the spring when the worm is hatching, as it is difficult to exterminate any other time. The bags can be picked from the limbs, but this method is laborious and not very effective.

Abraham Lincoln came within a few paces of fighting a duel with Gen. James Shields when the two were colleagues in the Illinois legislature. Shields was formerly a senator from Illinois, Minnesota and Missouri, and the incident was recalled on the forty-eighth anniversary of his burial. In the period just preceding the Civil war, when political fire was easily roused, he challenged Lincoln in order to defend his character against uncomplimentary letters, and especially a poem, accusing Lincoln of their authorship. Cavalry sabers were named as weapons and the duel almost came off in a small woods clearing near Alton. The seconds for both sides finally brought about an understanding and Shields was convinced that his distinguished opponent was not the author of the letters.

George A. Fox, for the past eight years executive secretary of the Illinois Agricultural association, has resigned.

Free instruction in harmonica playing is offered junior and adult residents of Illinois at the state fair this year. Charles Hartley, well-known instructor, will give the lessons from 10 to 11 a. m. in the big tent across from the women's building, from Monday to Friday. A contest will be held and winners will receive cash prizes and Hohner harmonicas.

NEW LAWS OF ILLINOIS

[This is a continuation of the list of bills that were passed by the Fifty-fifth General Assembly and have received the signature of Governor Small or have been allowed to become laws without his signature.]

House Bill 230 (Curran). Appropriates $1,315,000 for the ordinary and contingent expenses of the auditor of public accounts for the biennium ending June 30, 1929.

House Bill 238 (Johnson, G. J.). Amends section 4 of an act concerning sanitary districts and sewage disposal so as to limit the salary of the members of the board of trustees to $300 per annum instead of $100 per annum.

House Bill 254 (Curran). Appropriates $25,361,890 for the ordinary and contingent expenses of the state treasurer and for interest and retirement of state bonded indebtedness until the expiration of the first fiscal quarter after the adjournment of the next general session of the general assembly.

House Bill 276 (Foster). Amends sections 2a, 3 and 4 of the dog licensing act, thus enabling the owner of any turkeys or swine which are killed or injured by dogs to collect $10 and $25 per head, respectively, from the county dog license fund in the event that the owner of the dog committing the injury or killing is unknown or insolvent.

House Bill 269 (Weiss). Amends section 16 of the act regulating the administration of trusts by trust companies. Permits the auditor's statement of the assets and liabilities of a trust company to be published in a newspaper published in the county seat of the county, only in the event that no newspaper is published in the city, village or town where the principal office of the trust company is located.

House Bill 237 (Johnson, G. J.). Amends section 12 of an act to create sanitary districts and to provide for sewage disposal, approved June 22, 1917, by providing that the right to levy additional tax previously authorized by the legal voters may be terminated at any time after one or more levies thereunder, at an election, called upon petition of not less than 10 per cent of the legal voters of the district.

House Bill 277 (Goode). Amends section 115 of the school law, approved June 12, 1909, by adding a clause "eighteenth" to said section 115. Empowers school directors to establish classes for the instruction of persons over twenty-one years of age, and to pay necessary expenses of the same out of school funds of the district. H. B. 323, which was approved the same day as the bill and which amends the same section of the same act without setting out the new matter contained in this bill. See H. B. 421 also.

House Bill 278 (Griffin, C. A.). Amends section 60 of the civil administrative code. Provides that no school, college or university that refuses admittance to applicants solely on account of their race, color or creed shall be considered reputable and in good standing by the department of registration and education. Omits the provision in regard to public accountants. See H. B. 551 and S. B. 321, both approved July 7, 1927, both of which amend the same section of this same act and neither of which sets out the new matter contained in this bill.

House Bill 251 (Weiss). Amends section 4 of the act of June 24, 1919, requiring custodians of public moneys to publish statements of the receipts and disbursements thereof. The cost of such publication shall be paid out of the funds of the county, district, city, town, village or other body in which the officer holds office, instead of out of funds in the officers' hands.

House Bill 268 (Weiss). Amends section 1 of the act of 1909 concerning the publication of legal notices, providing that the word "newspaper" shall include a merged or consolidated newspaper formed by the merger or consolidation of two or more newspapers, one of which has been regularly published for at least six months prior to the first publication of the notice.

House Bill 240 (Lager). Provides for licensing and regulating of horse racing in state by director of agriculture. Gives the amount of license fee to be paid every day at each horse racing meet and requires a certain amount of the gate receipts to be paid to the director of agriculture. Licensees under act are required to keep accurate records of meets and may be required by the director to give bonds. License fee money shall be turned over to the state treasurer to be used as prize money or premiums at fairs and exhibitions in the state. Penalties for violation of act are provided. The operation of pari-mutuel or certificate system of wagering by patrons is authorized (minors excepted), the licensee to retain not to exceed 6 1/2 per cent and the breaks, as his commission. Acts in conflict herewith are rendered inapplicable. Provisions of act do not apply to racing meets held at fairs in the state.

House Bill 245 (Porter). Amends section 41 of the County court act to provide that the County court in the county of Hamilton shall convene on the second Monday of April and October instead of on the second Monday of January and August.

House Bill 256 (Igoe). Amends section 6 of an act relating to the civil service in park systems. Provides that the examination now required to be held at least once in two years shall be held once in two years unless, in the discretion of the board, such examinations are not necessary.

Effect of Sanitation

on Literary Manners

Literary manners have altered, not only as a result of the enlargement of the audience—though that was bound to have an important effect on literature—but as a result of changes in the manners and customs of everyday life. The increase of privacy, the improvement of sanitation, the growing custom of cleanliness both of habits and of the body, and the abolition of many gross usages, have resulted in making many things that once were the comic contretemps of ordinary life seem now merely offensive irrelevancies.

Probably improved sanitation has had more influence on literary manners than anyone yet suspects.

You will notice that what its enemies call prudery is most general in countries in which sanitation has made the greatest progress.

If Rabelais were to return as an Englishman or an American today, he would probably find himself blushing like a Victorian girl at having made some of his own jokes. This is not to belittle the jokes of Rabelais, but merely to recognize that the manners and convictions that were the natural soil of many of those jokes no longer exist today.—Robert Lynd in the Atlantic Monthly.

Coin Bank Idea Old

The use of coin banks as thrift indicators can be traced back far beyond the Christian era. Probably the oldest coin bank is that found by Count de Prorok and now in possession of the National City bank. This savings utensil, which is in the form of a closed urn of baked clay with a slit in the top, was found in the ruins of Utica, an ancient Phoenician city on the African coast near Carthage. It is believed to be at least 2,500 years old.

Modernistic Note in Paris Fashions

New Modes Will Blaze Their Own Trail; Small Hats to Hold Prestige.

The modernistic note is pronounced in the showings made at the Paris autumn openings. The new fashions will blaze their own trail, neither masculine nor feminine in the accepted sense. Thus the fall fashions are briefly summarized by a prominent Paris authority.

Paris is no longer a stern citadel setting forth fashion dicta along definite and concerted lines. The haute couture, of whose showings it was formerly said that they were each as similar to the other as peas in a pod, no longer appear to consult among themselves before issuing their seasonal creations. If you will consider the openings of the last four seasons, observes a fashion writer in the New York Herald-Tribune, you will clearly recognize a strong and certain trend toward diversification, which gives an entirely new aspect to the fashion question. There have been in a single season pencil silhouettes and widely bouffant outlines, ankle-length skirts and knee-length skirts, long sleeves and no sleeves, and the question of chic becomes seasonally more complex.

Beacon Lights to Chic.

The simplest solution, of course, is to take it for granted that every style sponsored by the Paris couturiers is correct, and that to be smart you need only select without too great thought the type which becomes you most. This method has its undoubted compensations, yet it unfortunately will be found frequently insufficient. The beacon lights to chic, after all, are what the really smart continentals are wearing, and while it is possible to dress adequately without paying too great attention to their raiment, smartness surely does not lie that way. It lies rather in the discretionary adaptations of such styles as have the authoritative approval of the haute couture and the equally haute monde.

Curiously enough it is easier to point out those tendencies now than it will be later, when the tremendous melange of fashion themes will make a temporary babel out of the mode. For one thing, fall fabrics and colors may be easily determined because the Paris fabricants must necessarily be a little previous with their new offerings. Thus it is already evident that beige, so popular during the summer, is giving way to gray. This latter color will not be confined to any one sector of fashion; it will be prominent in suits, in formal and informal frocks, and it is even destined to invade the scintillant robe du soir. This vogue for gray is an excellent guide to the general tenor of autumn colors. They are to be discreet rather than vivid, delicate rather than garish. A feature in evening clothes will be the continued eminence of black and white. Apparently the mesdames of the mode will never tire of this attractive duo. Separately they are smart; in combination they still occupy the center of the modal stage.

Wool Georgette Popular.

As to material, it can safely be prophesied that wool georgette will occupy a place at or very near the top during the fall and winter months. It is used particularly for ensembles, but its vogue will not be arrested there; it will be bound to penetrate into every domain of the new fashions. Another undoubted visitor for fall will be crepe romain, which will have its usual wide appeal. Printed silks and chiffons again appear, and their new feature is this: instead of the large and vivid patterns the tendency is toward delicate, minute effects. Among other autumn fabrics are georgette, crepe de chine, chiffon and, of course, the inevitable velvet. Indeed, there are some highly attractive velvets in small patterns being shown for fall and winter, with black and white, gray and white and black and gray the favored combinations. Another attractive velvet variation is the use of figured velvet patterns on such transparent backgrounds as georgette and chiffon. In the sports realm tussah, crepe de chine, finely woven tweeds and wool georgette are destined to lead all the rest.

There is apparent a slight but definite reaction against satin. Worth believes that the vogue for this material has been overplayed. He does not feel that its sheen is conducive to the chic of the current season and he infinitely prefers the glitter and richness of metal-threaded cloths.

Millinery is another phase of fashion which usually reaches a decision before the rest of the mode. For the fall season the situation is highly interesting. You may remember that during the last spring and the current summer the broad-brimmed sombrero finally attained a definite prestige; it was worn by numerous of the Paris impeccables, and it was confidently anticipated that by autumn the final detronement of the hardy cloche would be accomplished. Coupled with this prediction were rather prophecies that even the bob was going the way of all flesh.

Petite Chapeau to Rule.

It is not so to be. The threatened rise of the large hat was but a mushroom vogue which perished overnight. Paris gives not the slightest evidence of any weaning away from the petite chapeau, which once more will rule millinery realms. Autumn will see little rounded crowns replacing the pinches and tucks which have been so popular during the current months. It will witness a sharp vogue for turbans, helmet effects and, above all, the skull cap. The essence of the new chapeaux will be the fitted crown. Among the new hat materials velvet, sometimes used alone and often combined with felt or hatter's plush, will occupy a prominent position.

Among the autumn dress tendencies that attain an authoritative vogue are first the flared outline, back again in some novel forms, the uneven hemline, which will attain a wider prestige this autumn than ever before, and the uneven neckline, a new note which has already attracted a smart following. You may consider it certain that there will be an abatement of the sports frock tendency and a definite inclination toward more formal types of dress. As to the perennial debate about masculine and feminine types, the less said the better. Compared to the frocks of a decade ago, no modern dress could possibly be feminine; in comparison with the mannish garb of several seasons back what mode could be masculine?

It seems inconceivable, but there is no great perturbation over where the much-mooted hemline shall rest for fall and winter. High as it is, it could rise higher without causing any great comment—and that is the principal reason why it will rise no farther. Instead there are indications for an added inch or two, and this tendency will be particularly emphasized in robes du soir. The most significant point about the fall skirt length is not its shortness or longness—it is the curious apathy that now hovers over what was once Fashion's liveliest topic.

Combination in Lingerie

If you cannot decide whether a certain dress will require a slip or petticoat, be on the safe side and wear one of the new combination step-in and petticoat. The step-in has a hanging shadow-proof panel suspended from the waistband in both back and front, thus doing away with the necessity of wearing an extra garment.

For Travel Wear

The sweater frock of knitted wool in shades of beige and tan, worn under a beige or tan-tweed coat trimmed with brown fur, makes an admirable costume for travel.

NATHAN LEADS DAVID TO REPENTANCE

LESSON TEXT—II Sam. 11:1-12:23.
GOLDEN TEXT—A broken and contrite heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Shows David His Sin.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Nathan Calls David to Repentance.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Confessing and Forsaking Sin.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Repentance: What It Is and What It Does.

1. David's Crimes (II Sam. 11).

1. Adultery (vv. 4, 5).
He by his kingly authority brought Bathsheba, the beautiful wife of Uriah, one of his brave soldiers, into his harem.

2. Murder (vv. 14-18).

David sought to cover up his shameful act of adultery with Bathsheba by calling Uriah from the field of battle and giving him a furlough at home with his wife. (He first gave him honorable recognition by sending a portion of meat from the royal table—v. 8.) Uriah's high sense of military duty and propriety would not allow him to do this.

Failing in this, David corrupted him by making him drunk, with the expectation that Uriah would thus go home. When these schemes would not work he resorted to the terrible crime of exposing Uriah to the most dangerous place in the battle where he would surely be killed.

II. Contributing Factors in David's Fall.

1. Idleness (11:1).

It was the king's responsibility to go forth with his army to battle. David tarried at Jerusalem because of indolence or self-indulgence.

2. He looked upon a beautiful woman (11:2).

As he was lounging in idleness, this temptation was too great for him. He yielded to his lustful impulse and sent his servants to bring the woman to him. This action on the part of David is absolutely inexcusable. David had the power to turn from this sin and thus escape temptation.

III. David Rebuked by Nathan, the Prophet (12:1-12).

What David had done displeased the Lord (11:27). What he had done gratified his own carnal lust, but the serious thing is that it displeased the Lord. Because David was God's own, God could not let the matter rest. He therefore sent Nathan, His prophet, to him.

1. The parable of the ewe lamb (vv. 1-6).

Among the Jews it was customary to have pet lambs which were brought up with the children of the family and therefore regarded with tender affection. Nathan pictures before David a poor man whose sole possession consisted of one such lamb, and a rich neighbor when entertaining a guest had appropriated unto himself this lamb instead of drawing upon his numerous flock. This so aroused David's anger that he declared that the rich man should restore fourfold, and in addition forfeit his life. Nathan declared: "Thou art the man." In spite of David's awful sin, he had burning indignation against the wrongdoer.

2. Sentence of judgment (vv. 7-12). Perhaps no history records an indictment so terrible as this one.

(1) He recounted unto David God's peculiar favor (vv. 7, 8).

God had taken him from the sheepcote and lifted him to the throne, made him king over all Israel. He had delivered him from Saul's murderous plots and he had inherited Saul's royal possessions.

(2) David's shameful treatment of God's law (v. 9).

He pointed out that he had violated both tables of the law by worshipping the God of passion and had practiced covetousness, robbery, lying and murder.

(3) The awful judgment pronounced (vv. 10-12).

The prophet declared that the sword should never depart from David's house. He had used the sword to slay Uriah. God in His retributive justice permitted the sword to remain in David's house.

IV. David's Confession (vv. 13-23).

The confession of sin was so real to David that he declared that it had been committed against God (Ps. 51:4). He now was made fully conscious of his broken condition. He realized what it meant to be without innocence. Though he confessed his sin, as recorded in Psalm 32, and God forgave him, he had to suffer its consequence. "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

The Coward

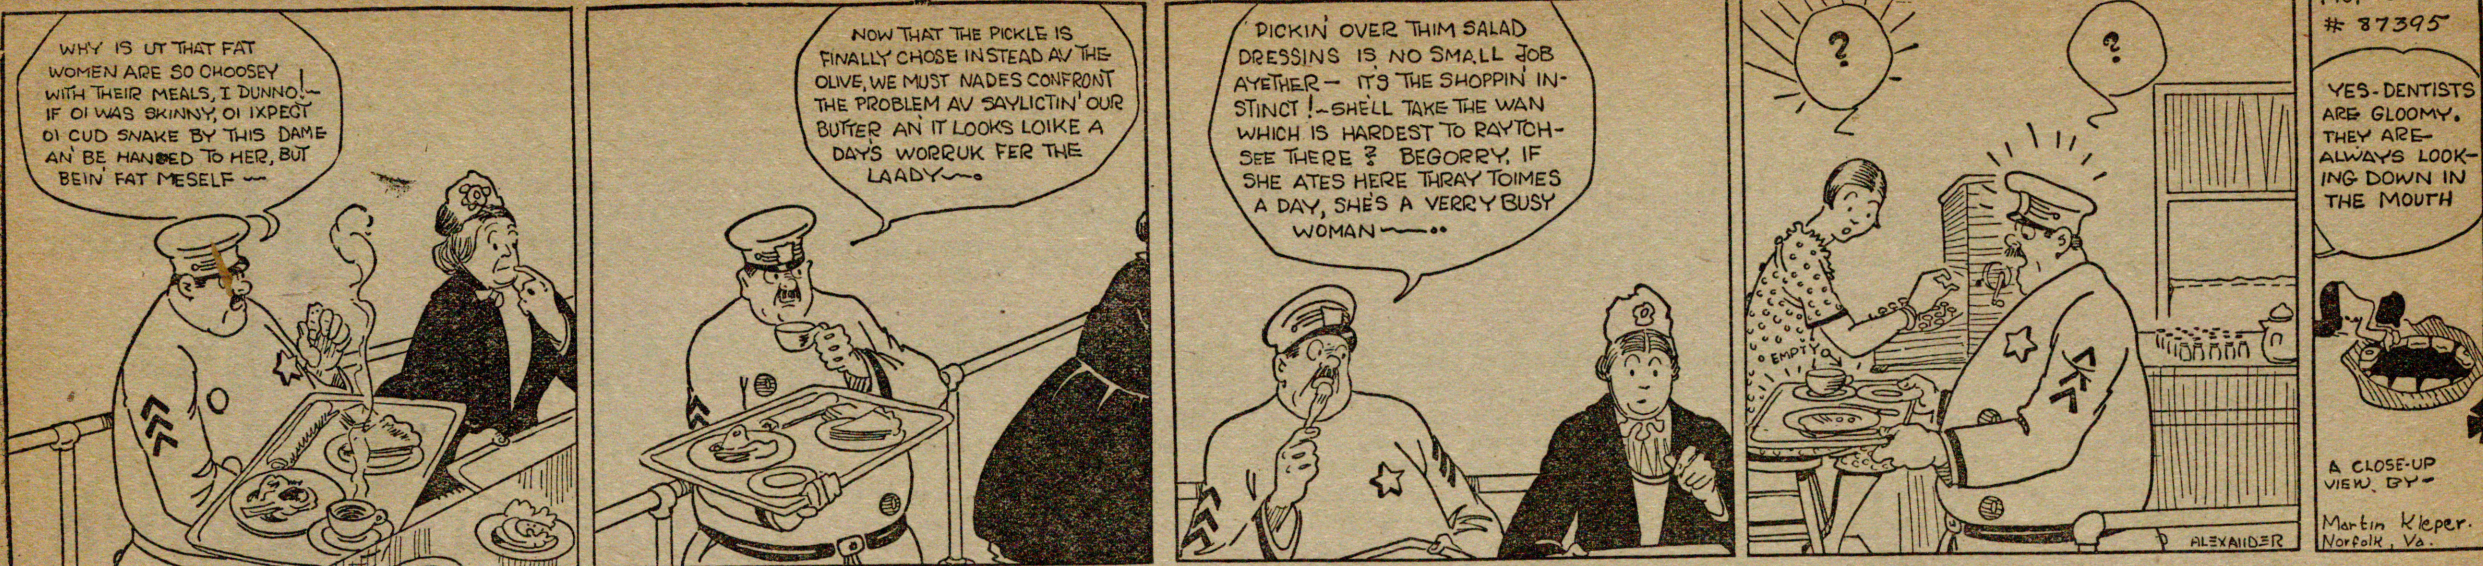

To die in order to avoid the pains of poverty, love, or anything that is disagreeable is not the role of a brave man, but of a coward. For it is cowardice to shun the misfortunes and trials of life, not undergoing death because it is honorable, but to escape evil.—Aristotle.

will be hampered by the machinations of unscrupulous, panders of polluted wares, and for every good thing we get, we will have an equal number of objectionable "swaps".

The peddling propensities of our elected representatives would not be of so much importance were it not for the inevitable "bag holding" of the neglected public, just as in the case of the "gas tax".

What will we get from the gas tax revenues? Fifty per cent will admittedly and undoubtedly be added to the depleted fund for the continuation of the one hundred million dollar bond issue program of highways, and fifty per cent will revert to the Counties in proportion to their respective collections.

What will be the program of the County Highway Department in the absence of a specific purpose named in the law? All we can do is, sit on the edge of the well worn and much used anxious seat, and "wait and hope and see".

Some day there is going to be a change. The evident stern reality of the tendency toward degeneracy of the select, sedate, capable and proficient houses of the legislature, to the level of "public squares" and "market day" with their "high pitch" men, grafters, and traders, must be checked. Then and only then, will the people come into their own. Under the present system no matter how sincere the member may be, when he throws his resolution or measure into the legislative "hopper" with the mutual understanding that everybody is going to get their share of the "grist", he is liable to find that somebody has switched his load into the macerator, and he gets nothing but mangled remains. The "gas tax" enactment is one of the best specimens of the emasculation act.

TINLEY PARK

Henry Dunker, aged 55 years residing on a farm near Tinley Park died in St. Francis hospital Thursday as the result of an infection caused by a cut on his knee with a sythe he was using in cutting weeds. The accident happened a month ago.

Mrs. Henry Wilke and daughters Viola, Esther and Mable enjoyed an auto trip to Starved Rock Tuesday.

Miss Erika Boeyer gave a miscellaneous shower Tuesday in honor of Miss Cornelia Hartman.

Mrs. J. Manske and children have returned from a trip to Minnesota.

Rev. A. Buddenhagen has gone on a trip to Clinton, Iowa.

Lois Rowdin is on the sick list. The Bridge foursome met for the first time this week.

Richard Ryan and Allan Brueggemann manufactured flower supports—birds beautifully and artistically painted, 25c and up—Adv.

Ruth Funk and Mildred Nielsen have gone to Barren Lake, Michigan to be the guests of Mrs. Louis Goessel.

A Garden Club for flower loving women has been organized by Mrs. Wallace B. Combs for the purpose of promoting a keener interest in horticulture and agriculture with the view of a possible flower and vegetable show being held in Tinley Park each year. In next week's paper a full account of the transaction of the preliminary meeting will be given.

Hemstitching, peccoting, buttons covered and pleating promptly done. Leave orders at the Gift Shop.

Adv.—Tinley Park is growing to the extent that a place to put old tin cans and rubbish is needed as a matter of keeping up the appearances of the back yards and from a sanitary standpoint, especially is this necessary during the summer months when all sorts of vermin find food and shelter in the tin cans, hibernating during the winter season and hatching their young in the spring.

If householders dump their refuse on the roadways as many are doing they are subject to arrest and a fine so perhaps, a way to overcome this difficulty may be found in the near future.

The flower show of the Beverly Hills Woman's Club will be Sept. 9 and at Palos Park Sept. 10 from 3 to 10 p. m.

Mrs. J. Keleher entertained the Ladies Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers from the Belt Railway of Chicago, at dinner last Wednesday. Covers were laid for 16 guests.

A class of Bridge was featured in the Gift Shop Tuesday instead of the customary bunco. Bridge will be taught free every Tuesday to anyone wishing to learn the game.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Funk arrived home from their trip to Green Bay only to be whisked away to Ottawa and Starved Rock by their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell.

Mrs. F. Penny, daughter of J. F. Thorwart an old resident of Tinley Park and Mrs. Fred Baughuss whose grandfather was Peter Engel land, were the guests of Mrs. W. B. Combs Monday, also Mrs. E. G. Klinger, Mrs. E. Chaffee, Mrs. Laufer and Mrs. A. Bovick of Chicago Heights.

John Funk and family have returned from a motor trip to Baraboo, Wisconsin and the Dells.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Bormet are now making their home with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stelter.

Hooked Rugs

Renewed interest in the hooked rugs of yesterday has returned, due to the great demand for home furnishings of the early American period. The making of hooked rugs is one of the oldest American home industries. Just who originated the idea, history does not record, but it is certain that the art of making these quaint rugs started in New England. The very early rugs were made by taking an old burlap sack cutting it open and tacking it to a frame and then drawing loops of old rags thru the mesh of burlap, forming flowers, geometrical and conventional patterns. These old rugs are now antique and bring fabulous prices from collectors and connoisseurs. The old fashioned slow process of hand hooking had to give way to more modern improved methods. The Susan Burr Hooked Rug machine makes it possible to do the work more perfectly and in much less time.

"One handle up and the other down Over the burlap so tightly drawn, With scraps of nose and orange and fawn.

Bits of purple and gray and blue And pieces of mother's wedding gown

Gleaned from the scrap bag and attic hoard, And garments long in the closet stored, Till on the frame a rug there grew."

Do you want individuality in your home, your living room, and bed chamber, the picturesque quarters of Colonial Days? "Then make a hooked rug either of wool yarn or of cotton or silk rags.

Demonstration of the Susan Burr needles with instructions on the making of a rug given in the Gift Shop, Tinley Park, free at any time. Hooked rugs also on display. Stamped patterns for sale.
